Message from the Chairman

Dear Students, Teachers and Parents,

This newsletter highlights the learning, achievements, and activities that have taken place in our school. It reflects the hard work of our students, the dedication of our teachers, and the valuable support of our parents. At our school, we believe that education is not only about doing well in studies but also about becoming kind, confident, and responsible individuals. We encourage every student to learn, grow, and make the best use of their talents.

I thank all our teachers, parents, and staff for their continuous support and commitment. Together, we can help our children build a bright and successful future. I hope you enjoy reading this newsletter and feel proud of the wonderful achievements of our school community.

Best wishes,

Chairman

A Message by the Principal

*"Our Experiences are the true Lessons,
No matter, what Time or Space we are in."*

Our Country Bharat, being a democracy offers the Right to participate actively and consciously. This conscience develops a sense of responsibility. The responsibility to think, plan and act in the interest of the Kutumb— Our Social World. Since historical times, newspapers and articles have been a source of motivation and a revolutionary tool in the hands of thinkers and the change makers. With this thought, we The Sanskar Public School are determined to offer single opportunity to our children to think and act responsibly in the interest of the society.

In this endeavor, we are launching a School's Newsletter named The Sanskar Times which would not only allow sharing information but would even allow the children to work consciously into the making of a better world. It would give freedom to a writer, philosopher, analyst within every child, who would think critically and creatively. It would open new windows for children to discover the hidden in Arts, Science and Literature. Students would be offered an opportunity to express independently and effectively before the readers. This is a sacred initiative taken, hoping to give wings to our children taking pilot flight towards future. On this note, we wish to provide our readers a delightful experience at reading!

— Shubhra Singh
Principal, Sanskar Public School

VISION

We, at Sanskar envision to providing a conducive and an inclusive environment where the rich cultural heritage of India is imbibed in the children to make them a worthy citizen of India.

We are determined to train the future generation with an ever-evolving approach and help them prove to be an asset to the society.

MISSION

We are inspired to provide child centric education in a happy learning environment that ensures an all-round development or the Holistic Development of a child in collaboration with all stakeholders (Parent and the teacher).

Poem of Nature

Look at the sky so blue,
Feel the wind as it goes through.
Trees are green, flowers are bright,
The sun gives us warm and golden light.

Birds are singing sweet and clear,
Rivers flow and sparkle near.
Butterflies dance here and there,
Nature is beautiful everywhere.

Let us care for every tree,
Keep our Earth clean and free.
Nature gives us love and care,
So let's protect it everywhere.

When Words Understand Us

We often speak of books as sources of knowledge. We praise them for improving vocabulary, sharpening intellect, and broadening perspectives. While all of this is true, it overlooks something far more remarkable.

Sometimes, books understand us.

There are emotions that exist beyond the reach of ordinary language—grief that arrives quietly, loneliness that cannot be explained, hope that survives against reason. We carry these feelings within us, unable to define them, until one day we encounter a sentence written by a stranger and think: So that is what I have been trying to say all along.

That is the peculiar magic of literature.

Long before us, Shakespeare wrote of ambition powerful enough to destroy a man. Jane Austen captured the unspoken language of pride and affection. Dostoevsky ventured into the restless corridors of guilt, doubt, and conscience. Centuries have passed, yet their words continue to feel familiar because human nature has remained astonishingly unchanged.

In an age of constant notifications and endless scrolling, we consume information at an unprecedented rate. Yet information and understanding are not the same thing. A screen may tell us what is happening in the world; a book helps us understand why people think, feel, love, fear, and dream the way they do.

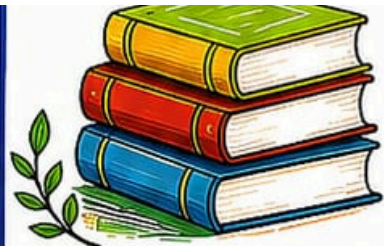

Reading is often described as an escape from reality. Perhaps it is. But it is also a return—to ourselves. Within stories, we discover parts of our own minds that we had never fully recognised. We find questions we did not know we were asking and answers we did not know we needed.

A book does not interrupt, judge, or hurry us. It waits patiently. And in doing so, it offers a rare kind of solace.

Perhaps that is why literature has survived every age and every invention. Beyond the pages, beyond the ink, beyond the words themselves, lies something profoundly human: the reassurance that our thoughts, however complex, and our emotions, however difficult to name, have been felt before.

And sometimes, there is great comfort in knowing that we are not the first person to feel what we are feeling right now.

The Man Eaten Of MALGUIDI DAYS

Name : Abhiman

Class : 10A

'The man eaten of Malgudi days' is a remarkable story with the blend of Indian philosophy and human psychology that revolves around the life of Naturalist Vasu who runs a printing press. His peaceful life got disturbed by a Vaishnavite priest, Natna, who is rude and arrogant. This masterpiece created by R. K. Narayan is truly a morality filled book.

SUMMARY:

A man Naturalist lives in a small South Indian town Malgudi, who runs a printing press. His life was going peaceful until a rude taxidermist Vasu went into his attic. Vasu got his title 'Man eater' because of his rude and annoying behaviour that ruins mentality, peacefulness and morality of people across life. The way Natna deals with him is truly filled with moral values and humour. Once, Vasu was working in his attic when Natna entered without permission and insulted his specimens. Vasu got angry but controlled himself, Natna often tried to interfere in Vasu's life, but Vasu remained calm and ignored his behaviour. Slowly, Natna realised his mistakes and understood the kindness of Vasu. In the end, their relationship changed and Natna became a better person, learning to respect others.

POSITIVE POINTS ABOUT THE NOVEL:

① Rich and good characterisation :

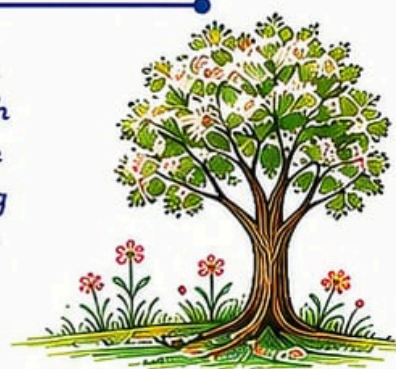

The characters of this novel especially Natna and Vasu are designed perfectly that can binds a emotional bond between the reader and the story.

COMPLETION OF THE STORY:

With time, the rude behaviour of Natna softens as he witnesses Vasu's patience, kindness and forgiveness. Vasu never reacts with anger; instead, he responds with humility and wisdom. His calm nature and love for all living beings slowly change Natna's heart. Natna begins to respect Vasu's quiet strength and the true meaning of goodness. Eventually, Natna becomes a better person and develops a friendship with Vasu. The story beautifully teaches that true power lies in patience, kindness and understanding, not in anger or pride.

MORAL OF THE STORY

Kindness and patience can change even the rudest hearts.
Respect others, live peacefully and stay humble.

Be the Reason Someone Smiles

A Note on the Power of Kindness

A smile is one of the simplest and most valuable gifts we can give to others. It costs nothing, yet it has the power to brighten someone's day. In today's busy world, many people are stressed, worried, or feeling lonely. A few kind words, a helping hand, or even a warm smile can make a big difference in someone's someone's life.

As students, we get many opportunities to spread happiness every day. We can share our notes with classmates, help a friend understand a lesson, encourage someone who feels discouraged, or simply be polite and respectful. These small acts of kindness may seem ordinary, but they can leave a lasting impression on others.

Sometimes, we believe that only great achievements make a person successful. However, good behaviour, kindness, and a caring nature are equally important. A person who spreads positivity and makes others smile is truly successful because kindness creates stronger friendships and happier environment environment.

When we make someone smile, we also feel happier ourselves. A smile is contagious—it spreads joy, builds confidence, and strengthens relationships. Even the smallest act of kindness can inspire others to do the same, creating a chain of positivity.

So, let us all try to be the reason someone smiles today. A small act of kindness can make the world a better place—one smile at a time.

Who was at the door?

Date : _____

I am Poorvika, and I live in Delhi with my parents. As my summer vacations were going on, I came to my grandma's house with my mother. After spending our whole day travelling to our hometown which is in Panipat, we reached at grandma's house around 10:00 pm. After having a huge dinner, it was 11:00 pm and we were sitting in the hall. After my grandpa passed away, my grandma was living alone in that house, only with the memories of her husband. We had a bamboo garden in the backyard and a pond right beside the garden. During daytime, the sound of birds is very soothing to hear, but in night it looked equally scary and creepy.

After having our dinner, I went to get a separate room to sleep while my grandma and my mother went to sleep in different rooms. While lying on the soft bed with a light cold breeze was touching my skin, I was texting my friends whom I shipped to Delhi. While thinking about adventures, I didn't realize when I drifted to sleep.

Suddenly my eyes opened in the middle of the night. I looked at the clock which was hanging on the wall; it was 3:02 am. I felt thirsty, so I went to the kitchen to have a glass of water, and through the window I could clearly see my mother and my grandma sleeping. I saw into some random thoughts and then I suddenly hear my mom's voice which was coming from the backyard door. She called my name very sweetly and calmly, the love and affection was so clear in her voice. I could not resist, so I went to the door to open it. I was about to open the door, then I realized that, it was maa's voice at the door, then who is sleeping in it. I froze at my spot. That voice came again, saying what are you, open me soon, but this time the voice was getting more aggressive. My heart started beating fast and my intrusive thoughts were pushing me to open the door. The silence was eating me from inside. After some seconds, the voice again called me, this time the voice was positive at all. It was more like as if someone was ordering me to open the door. All of sudden, I felt a hand wrapping my arm pulling me. It was my grandma. She said nothing, but her eyes were wildly opened looking at the situation. She then pulled me towards her room, my maa was sleeping; she closed the door. Till then, my mom also woke up. I was so hella confused, I didn't know what was going on. We all sat on the bed, my grandma then told me that, it was "Nishu", she called 3 people's name with the voice of their loved ones! She warned me to never open the door. She told me that it's Nishu's limitation that she can only call someone only three times. She told me to wait for her fourth call, then to open the door.

We didn't sleep that night; when sun rose, I went out to the backyard. And what I saw left me stunned! There were scratches on the door, as if someone scratched her nails on the door very aggressively. And... two footprints facing the door and on the garden area. Only one thing I knew that, whoever I am going to tell this, no one is gonna believed not a single person. I still try to convince myself that it was just a dream, but what do I do with those footprints and the scratches left behind.

Moral of the Story

Sometimes, what we hear is not always what it seems. True wisdom lies in staying calm, trusting our instincts, and being cautious in uncertain situations.

“Not every voice that calls you belongs to someone you know.”

CURIOSITY CHRONICLES

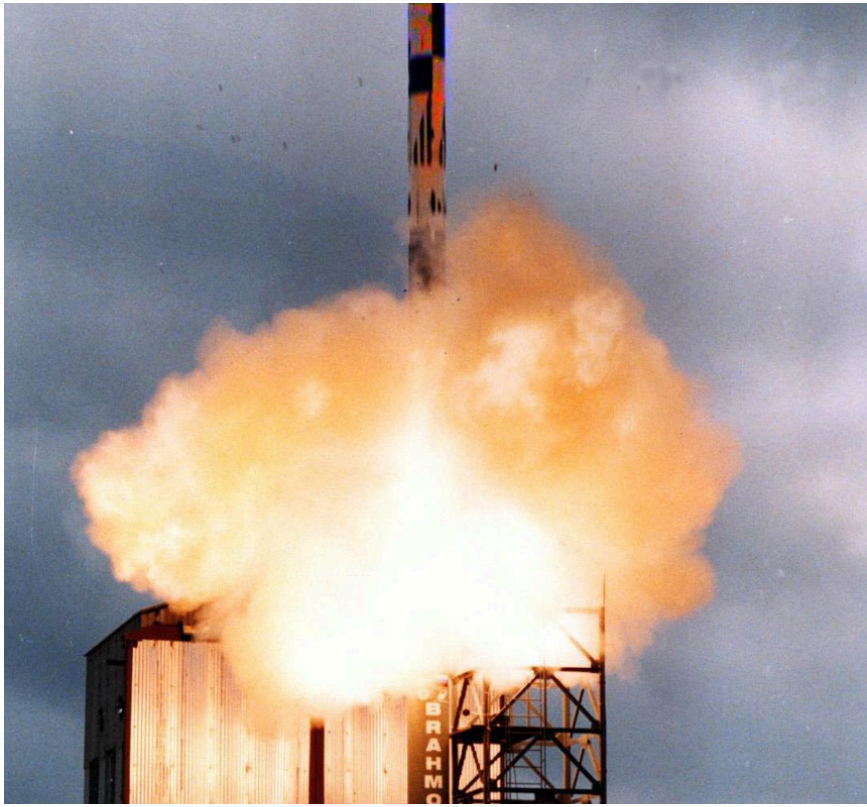

Brahmos missile

India's Fast and Powerful Defence Weapon

The BrahMos missile is one of India's most advanced defense weapons. It is a supersonic cruise missile developed jointly by India and Russia. Known for its speed, accuracy, and flexibility, the missile can be launched from land, ships, aircraft, and submarines.

BrahMos has become an important part of India's military strength because it can strike targets quickly and precisely. It is much faster than many other cruise missiles, which makes it difficult to stop once launched. The missile is designed for both anti-ship and land-attack missions, giving it a wide range of uses in modern warfare.

One of the major reasons BrahMos is so well known is its success in international defense markets. The Philippines became the first foreign country to buy the missile. After that, other countries such as Indonesia and Vietnam also showed strong interest. Several nations in Asia, the Middle East, Africa, and South America have been linked to possible export deals or discussions.

The growing global interest in BrahMos shows how important the missile has become in modern defense technology. It also reflects India's progress in building advanced indigenous weapons and strengthening its role in the international defense sector.

At the same time, BrahMos remains a symbol of India-Russia cooperation. The missile combines the technical expertise of both countries and continues to develop as new versions are tested and exported.

In short, BrahMos is not just a missile but a major achievement in modern military science. Its speed, precision, and global demand have made it one of the most talked-about defense systems in the world.

Beyond “Beti Bachao, Beti Padhao”: Every Child Deserves Equal Care

The slogan “Beti Bachao, Beti Padhao” has played an important role in raising awareness about the rights, education, and safety of girls in India. It has encouraged support girls and work towards gender equality. However, an important question also deserves attention: What about boys?

Whenever a crime against a girl takes place, the entire country comes together to demand justice. Candle marches organized, social media is filled with campaigns, and people raise their voices. This support is necessary and should continue. But when boys become victims of violence or injustice, their stories often receive much less attention.

For example, many people still remember the tragic RG Kar Medical College and Hospital case in Kolkata. But how many remember the Sourabh “drum case”? Every victim deserves justice, regardless of gender.

Boys are also children. They have dreams, emotions, responsibilities, and the right to live safely and with dignity. They, too, need quality education, proper guidance, healthcare, protection, and equal opportunities to build a better future.

Today, discussions often focus on whether girls are safe in our country. This is an important concern. But we should also ask: Are boys safe? The answer is not always yes. Boys can also face abuse, violence, bullying, exploitation, and mental health challenges, yet many suffer in silence because society expects them to “be strong.”

Boys also face challenges and deserve care, protection, and support.

Girls deserve equal opportunity to learn and grow in safety and dignity.

At the same time, we must recognize that girls have faced discrimination and violence for generations, and many initiatives have been created to address these challenges. Supporting girls does not mean ignoring boys. A truly equal society should care for both.

There are several policies and facilities designed specifically for women, such as reserved seats in public transport and reservations in certain sectors. These measures were introduced to address historical inequalities and improve women's participation and safety. Alongside these efforts, we should also ensure that boys' concerns receive adequate attention and support wherever needed.

According to various reports, many boys are also victims of crimes, abuse, and exploitation. Every child who suffers deserves protection, justice, and compassion, irrespective of gender.

A strong nation is built when every child is valued equally. Instead of creating a divide between boys and girls, we should work towards a society where both are safe, educated, respected, and empowered.

Perhaps the message of our society should be:

“बेटा-बेटी दोनों को बचाओ, दोनों को पढ़ाओ, और दोनों को समान अवसर दिलाओ।”

Because every child matters, and every child deserves a bright future.

Every child matters — equal care for all.

THE UNTOLD STORY OF NORTH-EAST INDIA

Exploring the Beauty, Culture, and Diversity of India's North-East

North-East India is one of the most beautiful and culturally rich regions of our country. Blessed with majestic mountains, lush green valleys, tea gardens, rivers, and forests, it is a wonderful destination to visit throughout the year. Popular places such as Darjeeling, Kalimpong, and the tea estates add to its natural charm.

In many hilly areas, houses are traditionally built using wood and bamboo, which are well suited to the local climate. The region's rugged terrain makes road construction challenging, and some remote areas still face issues related to electricity and infrastructure.

Rice is the staple food of the region. Popular dishes include rice balls, rice roti, and many other rice-based delicacies. As rice cultivation is more common than wheat farming, wheat-based foods are consumed less frequently.

North-East India is home to diverse communities, each with its own language, traditions, customs, and colourful traditional attire. The region includes the Seven Sisters—Assam, Arunachal Pradesh, Manipur, Meghalaya, Mizoram, Nagaland, and Tripura—along with Sikkim, which is often associated with the North-East.

MAJOR FESTIVALS OF NORTH-EAST INDIA

- Assam: Bihu, Ambubachi Mela, Karbi Youth Festival
- Arunachal Pradesh: Losar, Mopin, Ziro Festival
- Manipur: Yaoshang, Sangai Festival, Ningol Chakouba
- Meghalaya: Wangala, Shillong Cherry Blossom Festival, Behdienkhlam
- Mizoram: Chapchar Kut, Pawl Kut
- Nagaland: Hornbill Festival, Sekrenyi
- Sikkim: Saga Dawa, Losong, Pang Lhabso
- Tripura: Kharchi Puja, Garia Puja

MESSAGE

We should always respect every culture and ensure that no one feels uncomfortable because of their language, appearance, or traditions. Unity, kindness, and mutual respect strengthen our nation. Every Indian is equal, and together we can build a more inclusive and

North-East India covers approximately 262,179 square kilometres, accounting for nearly 8% of India's total geographical area.

Although some parts of the region still face developmental challenges due to difficult terrain, its rich cultural heritage, biodiversity, and natural beauty make it one of India's greatest treasures.

How the Real World Looks: Justice and the Constitution

The Constitution of India promises justice, equality, and freedom to every citizen. It says that everyone should be treated equally and fairly. Justice means giving every person equal rights and protecting them from unfair treatment.

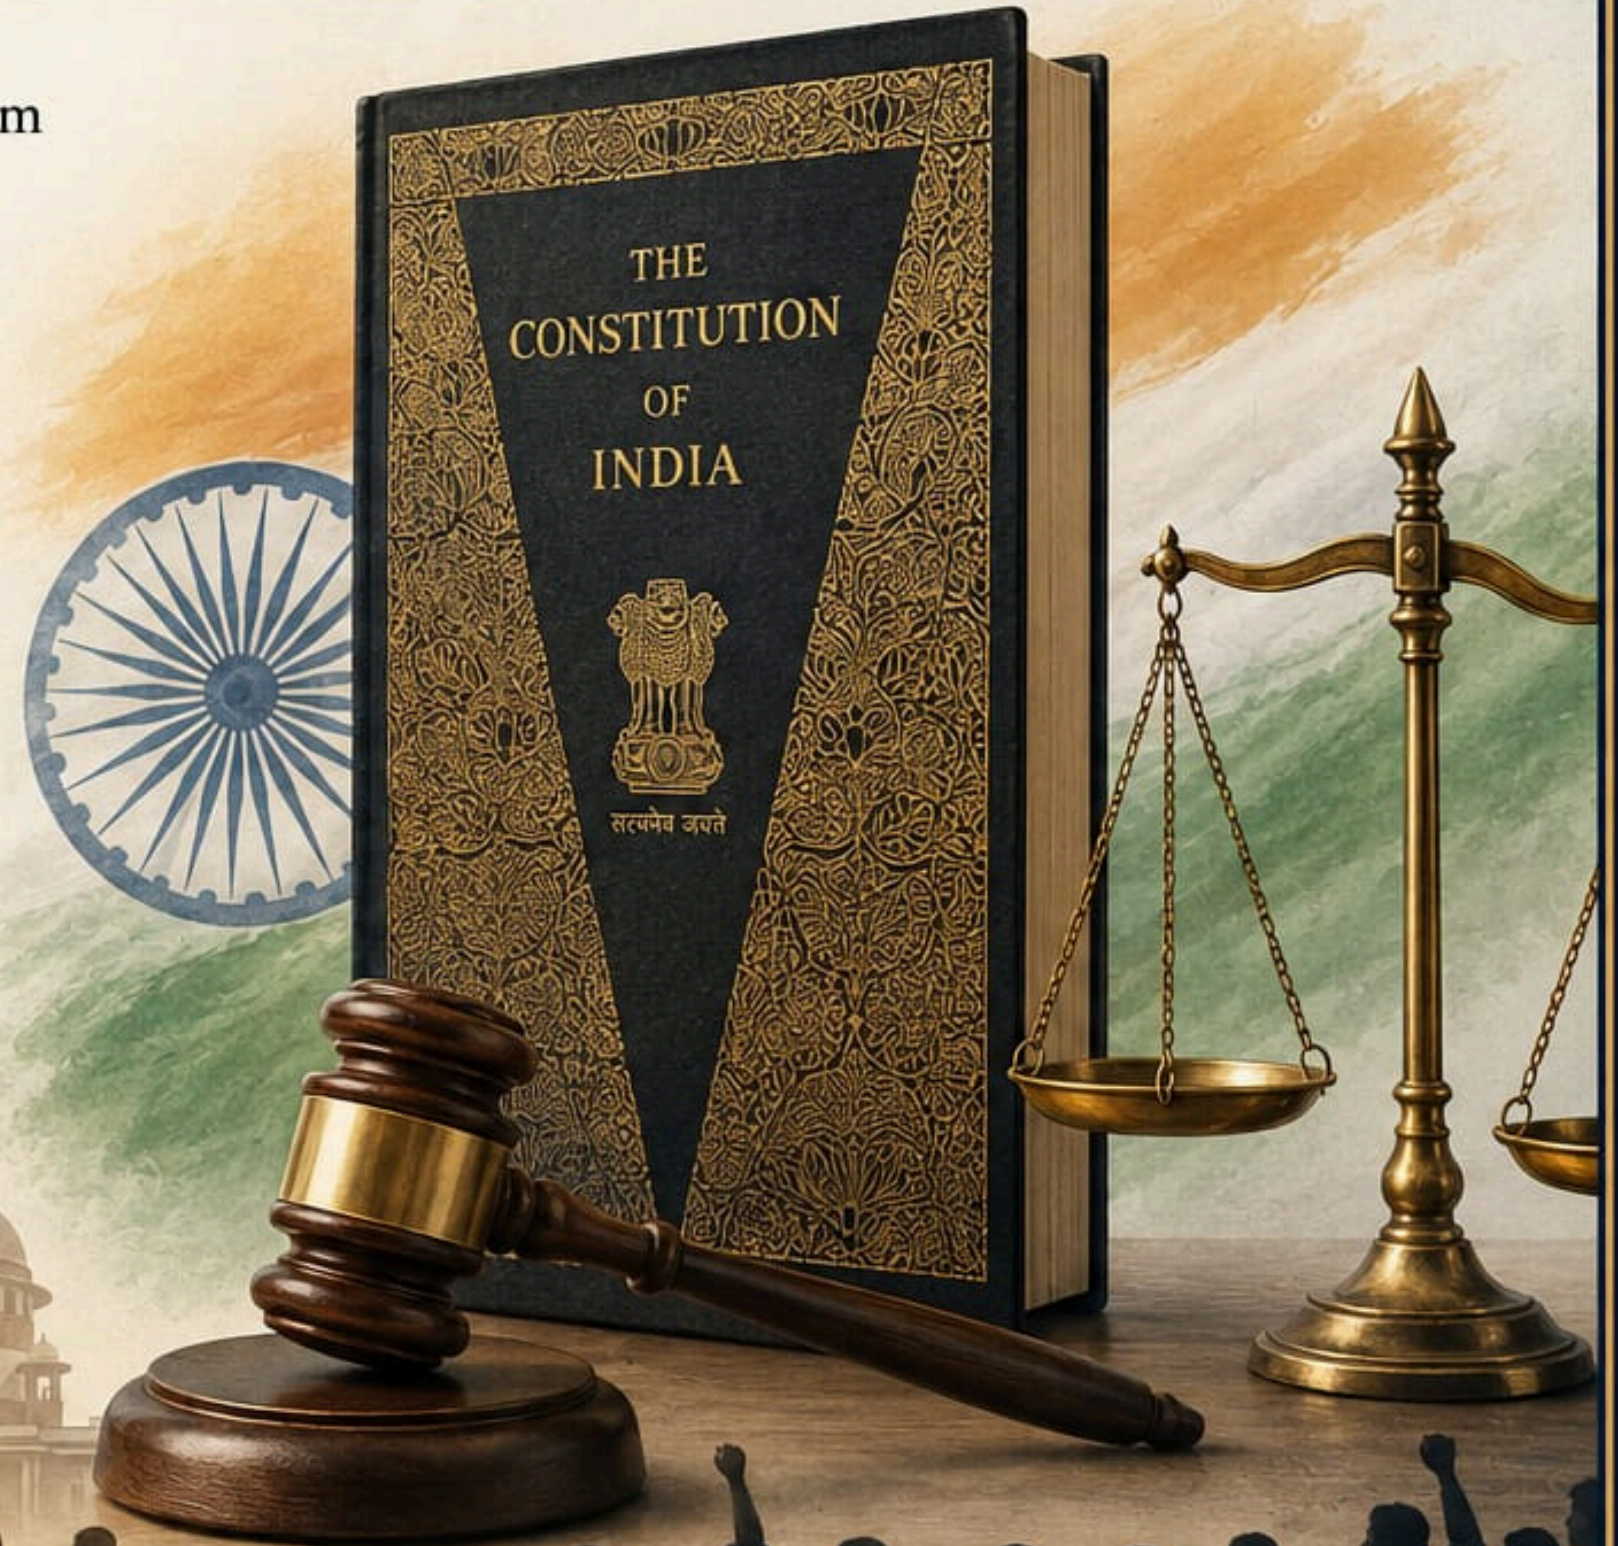

But the real world is often different. Many people have to wait for years to get justice in courts. Sometimes, powerful people escape punishment because of their money or influence. Even today, some people face discrimination because of their caste, religion, gender, or financial condition.

This shows that there is a difference between the ideals written in our Constitution and the reality around us. The Constitution shows us the right path, but it is our responsibility to follow its values. Only then can justice become a reality for everyone.
